In some of our communities, liturgical vestments can get quite ornate. Clergy can wear special robes, hats, and stoles during the worship service. These articles of clothing have a long history and a symbolic meaning. They are often very beautiful and impressive.

However, one item is missing that I think could be a valuable addition to any spiritual leader's ensemble: a pair of Groucho glasses.

These could be worn once a year in order to remind the congregation not to take things too seriously. Just a suggestion. But visualize your priest, pastor, rabbi or imam in a pair and I think you will get the idea.
